picture looked at the moment, a delayed dispatch from Okinawa disclosed that Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell said there last week that the Japanese war can drag on another two years.

Stilwell, who knows his Japanese, said it was wrong to consider Japan a pushover.

Value Unknown

Too little was known of the Borneo invasion yet to assess its value. If the landings were confined to Labuan island, it would be merely a move to control the western approaches to north Borneo and deny the Japanese their Brunei bay naval base. A landing on the mainland would mean the opening of a tough campaign through jungle country with oil and rubber as the prizes.

In its final stages, the Okinawa fighting still was the worst of all Pacific battles. The enemy continued to throw his suicide plane corps at the fleet massed off the island, with some damaging effect.

Pacific fleet headquarters announced another light warship was sunk yesterday. The total of ships sunk or damaged in the Okinawa battle and associated operations now was 78—the highest losses the American Navy ever suffered in a single campaign. Most of the losses have been in light craft, but four destroyers are known to have been sunk in the 83-day long battle.

Final Push On

Three divisions, Army and Marine, joined in the final push against the Yaeju-Dake escarpment, where the Japanese fought with their backs to the sea. The 96th infantry division attacked frontally, fighting up the steep slopes, routing the enemy from caves with flame-throwers, grenades, and even bayonets in dirty, hand-to-hand fighting.

The battalion which got a foothold on the rim of the escarpment had to fight off six separate counter-attacks through Saturday.

On the west coast, the enemy pocket below the Oroku peninsula was about cleaned up. After the capture of the fishing village of Itonan, the Japanese there were squeezed into a pocket of three and a half square miles.

versal compulsory conscription," he said.

"The imperative preparedness of tomorrow is that which will give comfort to the skies."

Daniels said that in world wars one and two American soldiers went overseas with only a few months training. "And fighting side by side with the French (who had peacetime conscription) demonstrated that long, compulsory training did not make better soldiers."

Daniels pointed out that he was testifying from his eight years experience as secretary of navy and added, "no man believes more in having a gun well primed than I do."

He advocated keeping an adequate military force after the war to guarantee national security and until it is determined what the United States must do to contribute its share to an international police force.

He said that if men are needed for the land forces in the post-war period they should be recruited by voluntary enlistment which can be done "if the pay is adequate, the dignity of youth respected, education provided and the door to promotion opened."

"If these American rights and opportunities are made a part of military life, there will be so many American youths volunteering that no branch of military service will need to conscript men," he said.

somewhat similar amendment by Sen. Robert A. Taft, R., O., requiring a profit margin for non-agricultural products based on 1939 levels, is given less chance of passage.

Price Administrator Chester A. Bowles has charged that the Thomas amendment if adopted by congress will cause a breakdown in the whole price control system.

Meanwhile pending before the senate are the administration's program to stimulate world trade through further tariff reductions and stabilize world economy through an international bank and currency fund.

Hearings on the Bretton Woods monetary agreement—authorizing U. S. participation to the extent of $6,000,000,000 in an international bank and currency stabilization fund—begin tomorrow before the senate banking committee.

Floor debate is expected to start tomorrow on a bill to extend for three years the reciprocal trade agreements act and authorize tariff cuts 50 per cent below the current "floor."

President Truman won victories on both bills in the house of representatives. The senate finance committee, however, voted against him last week on the tariff reduction authority. Administration leaders believe they can restore the authority on the floor but the margin will be close.

If the hope of putting over two smashing victories on administration foreign policy in rapid succession, administration leaders adopted a speed-up policy on the Bretton Woods hearings.

Senate Democratic Leader Alben W. Barkley told banking committee chairman Robert F. Wagner, D., N. Y., that he'd like to wind up the hearings this week.

This reversed Barkley's previous plan of postponing senate action on Bretton Woods until after a Summer recess expected to start a month from today. He said he'd like to get action before the recess if possible.

The senate's action on both bills was considered particularly important because of the senate's treaty-ratifying status. It may indicate the trend the senate will take on the forthcoming treaty to set up a world security organization now being drafted at San Francisco.

Barkley said he would like to have the United States become the first nation to ratify the security organization treaty. He said that the question of a Summer recess now hinges principally on when that treaty is ready for submission to the senate.

ville and Muhlenberg township schools had also admitted breaking into Circleville high school. The burglaries were committed the night of May 15.

Dwight Clemons, Brown county sheriff, told Sheriff Radcliff that the boys had burglarized the Pickaway county jail but had none of the money they had stolen on them at the time of their arrest.

The four boys, Robert Gerard, 17, Richard Martin, 17, Hubert Johnson, 18, and William McCune, 16, were admitted to the Mansfield Reformatory last Wednesday.

give the veto opponents an opportunity to cool off after last Saturday night's hectic session. But Evatt didn't rest. He was busy all day Sunday contacting other delegations in an effort to win their support and map new strategy. He also served notice that he had a lot more to say personally about his objections to the veto.

The conference, meanwhile, moved rapidly forward with other phases of its charter-making task. The general assembly commission scheduled a morning meeting to act on the report of its committee on economic and social cooperation. Officials hoped to get all four commissions down to work this week in order to wind up the conference by the middle or latter part of next week.

Aside from the veto question, there remained a little better than a half dozen major open issues for committees to decide. Most of these were expected to be resolved this week. Among the remaining major issues were:

1. Secretary generalship. A committee approved his nomination by a majority of the security council but the big five wants a veto right over nomination. The steering committee has sent this issue back to committee for reconsideration.

2. Deputy secretaries general. A committee omitted all mention of deputies in the draft charter. The big five want specific provision for five of them. This matter also has been referred back to committee by the steering committee.

3. Expulsion. A committee eliminated all reference to expulsion and the big powers, particularly Russia, want it reinstated as it was in the Dumbarton Oaks draft. It too has been referred back to the committee for reconsideration.

4. Security council reports to the assembly. A committee wrote in a provision which would allow the assembly to approve, disapprove or make recommendations on reports received from the council. The big powers don't like this and the matter has been referred back for new consideration.

5. Domestic jurisdiction. Australia wants written into this provision words specifying that the only exception on domestic interference will be in the case of enforcement action by the council.

6. The amending process. This involves two unfinished questions—a time limit on the calling of a constitutional convention to revise the charter and the big five veto over amendments coming out of such a convention. A subcommittee already has approved a provision which would make it mandatory to call a constitutional convention within five to ten years after the charter comes into force. The big five want no specific time limit and insist on a veto over all amendments.

There are several other odds and ends hanging fire, including the matter of transitional arrangements and some Australian amendments on the trusteeship chapter.

home canning in 1944," he said.

Reports on the industrial outlook, he said, are so bad that "thousands" of small processors will be forced to close their plants, and large canners "will have to reduce their packs materially and create a further shortage in those food products."

Jonkman said that according to the most reliable information available, the United States planned to ship 2,000,000 tons of sugar to European countries at a time when Great Britain's stocks were above normal and American reserves "perilously low."

He said he warned the Commodity Credit Corp. two months ago that unless early action was taken "the 1946 sugar crop would again be so low as to create another serious situation in that year."

"Despite that warning the Commodity Credit Corp. has not yet made arrangements for the purchase of the 1946 Cuban and Puerto Rican sugar crops, our principal sources of supply at the present time," Jonkman said.

"It is difficult to understand why there should be such bureaucratic delay in the face of the facts which have been known to everyone for months."

specific tasks were threatened with loss of their ration cards. Allied armies get first call on German labor, the dispatch said, after which civilian needs may be taken care of. Businesses permitted to resume work included food processing, medical goods, fertilizers, soap, drugs, coal, clothing, leather goods and liquid fuel.

Montgomery Explains

Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, commander of British occupation forces, told the German people that British troops had been forbidden to fraternize with them because the allies were determined to teach them once and for all they had been beaten.

"It will not always be like this," Montgomery said. "We are a christian people that likes to forgive. We like to smile and be friendly. It is our aim to destroy the evil of the national Socialist system. It is too early to be certain that this aim has been attained."

The Soviet-controlled Berlin radio said Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov, Soviet occupation commander, had issued orders to permit the revival of all anti-Fascist political parties and the organization of free trade unions in the Russian zone of Germany.

Zhukov abolished all Fascist laws, decrees and instructions, Berlin said.

He said he warned the Commodity Credit Corp. two months ago that unless early action was taken "the 1946 sugar crop would again be so low as to create another serious situation in that year."

"Despite that warning the Commodity Credit Corp. has not yet made arrangements for the purchase of the 1946 Cuban and Puerto Rican sugar crops, our principal sources of supply at the present time," Jonkman said.

"It is difficult to understand why there should be such bureaucratic delay in the face of the facts which have been known to everyone for months."

Montgomery Explains

Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, commander of British occupation forces, told the German people that British troops had been forbidden to fraternize with them because the allies were determined to teach them once and for all they had been beaten.

"It will not always be like this," Montgomery said. "We are a christian people that likes to forgive. We like to smile and be friendly. It is our aim to destroy the evil of the national Socialist system. It is too early to be certain that this aim has been attained."

The Soviet-controlled Berlin radio said Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov, Soviet occupation commander, had issued orders to permit the revival of all anti-Fascist political parties and the organization of free trade unions in the Russian zone of Germany.

Zhukov abolished all Fascist laws, decrees and instructions, Berlin said.

TRAINED TO FIGHT

MILITARY training in peacetime looks like a useful thing to the army which is fighting this war. That's the opinion of Dr. A. A. Hunter, Cambridge, O., district superintendent of the Methodist Church, who says: "Practically all the patients with whom I have talked at Fletcher General Hospital in Cambridge are in favor of some form of conscription after the war."

Certainly they are the ones who should know. They're the men who found themselves waging battles to the death against an aggressor whose armies were taught only war from childhood. They won, in spite of their short training, because that was thorough and because they were Americans, intelligent and ingenious, adapting themselves quickly to new conditions.

But they know, from experience, three things which lead them to favor peacetime conscription. If they had had such previous experience, much of the adjustment time could have been saved, the job done more quickly. If the enemy had known that we had millions of men with at least a year's military knowledge, he would have been slower to attack. And, should there be a next time, rocket bombs and similar weapons will leave little time for elementary training. These are points worth considering.

BETTER PEDESTRIANS

THE post-war pedestrian must think quicker and move faster, else he will gradually become extinct. So Herman A. MacDonald, Massachusetts Commissioner of Public Works, told a New York traffic conference. MacDonald is concerned at the coming increase in car speed, and is anxious to preserve this dwindling species.

An Oregon engineer complained to the convention that pedestrians were coddled. They expect motorists to get out of their way, which everyone knows they have no intention of doing.

A more constructive suggestion called for more sidewalks on rural roads. Walking on some country highways is about as healthful as walking on the railroad ties.

CARS COMING

INDUSTRIAL "reconversion" is a bugaboo to many people, but apparently need not be, if things are handled wisely. John R. Davis, Ford sales and advertising manager, insists that the closing of the great Ford bombing plants, which have latterly displaced motor production, need not cause any serious loss of jobs or long delay in changing over. And when the changes are accomplished, there will be eventually a place in the Ford organization for every one of the 1300,000 employees now on the payroll. As for quantity production, the industry as a whole, when it gets its full stride again, will be building five to six million cars a year, of which Ford will build 2,000,000.

These are pleasant things to look forward to, while gazing sadly at a demobilized flivver in the garage.

How to Avoid Fist Fights
Between Angry Congressmen

Punching Bags in Cloak
Room Might Prove Help

By HELEN ESSARY
Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON—The extra legislative activities of those two congressmen, John Taber (R) of New York and Pat Cannon (D) of Florida, who fight and fight over the $2,500 expense allowance for House members, convince me that a little of the extra United States cash should be used to set up a few punching bags in congressional cloak rooms.

If the irate legislators could give their big muscles a work-out before meeting in debate, brawls might be avoided when the boys come face to face.

Lady members of Congress don't fight. Or pull hair, either. They speak a few off-stage words about each other now and then. But you have to be pretty mean yourself to recognize anything but kindness in even the worst intentioned adjectives.

Women members of Congress not only behave better than the gents, they also are better looking. Most of the feminine members wear sleek suits, plus frilly or tailored blouses and boutonnieres and such. Also the feminine members have that brushed-up-look the fashion magazines demand, which is so difficult to combine with a career. A whipped-down-look is much more easily achieved.

Congresswoman Margaret C. Smith of Maine is a smart looking, smart acting congresswoman. She is, you might say, "the congresswoman's congresswoman." She is alert and reliable, thinks clearly and doesn't make mistakes. Just read an entertaining magazine article on "Maine Meets the Pacific" by Mrs. Smith, in which the

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

NEW YORK, June 11—It was a hard-war program which Mr. Truman put before congress. Unlike Mr. Roosevelt, he told the people what was needed in men and energy to defeat the Japanese. Like Mr. Roosevelt, his primary point was that we must drive the Japs to unconditional surrender.

Criticism immediately arose, disclosing opposition on this point such as existed against Mr. Roosevelt. It is not ill-natured opposition but represented a genuine view that lives can be saved by concessions.

I saw one critique which put the matter this way: Mr. Roosevelt was a frustrated person trying to imitate in this war general "unconditional surrender" Grant in the Civil war, who earned his nickname at Fort Donaldson but gave generous terms to Lee at Appomattox.

I think I can demonstrate, if you will read on, that any procedure except the Roosevelt-Truman policy of unconditional surrender is not only impractical but impossible—and the hope of many people to save lives by offering conditional surrender is founded on an unsound understanding of military history, particularly the same Civil war.

The Japanese war is being conducted by a ruling military clique with the full support of the people. No terms to the clique are possible because these would mean the end of the persons who operate it. Any terms offered to the people could not be effective until they overthrow the clique, and therefore the only feasible time to consider terms is after that. But when they have done this, they are prepared for unconditional or any surrender.

Try to write some terms to encourage them to revolution and you will see how impossible is the task. One critique I saw suggested we offer the people the restoration of their emperor. What emperor, to what Japanese class and for how long? Unless Jap military might is first crushed can we possibly contrive anything to prevent another bigger Pearl Harbor 20 years hence—a successful one next time.

I do not believe wars can be ended except by unconditional surrender. The terms which Grant gave Lee at Appomattox had nothing to do with the end of the war. Further resistance proved impossible before Lee asked for terms. The South had been crushed. Indeed, it lay prostrate for nearly 50 years. Does anyone think an earlier conclusion could have been reached to the Civil war if Grant's terms had been offered earlier? It is impossible for anyone to believe that. And what were those terms? Basically that the officers could keep their sidearms and the soldiers their horses (which they owned anyway as the Confederate commissary could not furnish any) in order that they might go home to plow and to live, without requiring federal support.

You have to beat an enemy in any war in order to get any terms, then after they are beaten, you can call it whatever you like—it still is unconditional surrender. In the war of 1812 we negotiated a peace before we won the battle of New Orleans, and this fiasco resulted in terms so unpopular they could not be enforced by the victors against us.

Nothing can be gained by kidding ourselves. Lives are saved in wars by swift, decisive action. The quicker you beat the enemy, the smaller is your casualty list. Therefore what you need is overpowering might and shrewd generalship, not peace programs. You can never save lives by selling your war aims short.

only woman member of the Naval Affairs committee tells of her 25,000 mile air trip to the Pacific and the great strength of the United States Navy there.

● NOW THAT WE ARE TALKING ABOUT WOMEN, here is a bouquet for Mrs. James M. Helm, White House social secretary. Mrs. Helm was secretary to Mrs. Woodrow Wilson for six years. She was secretary to Mrs. Roosevelt for 12 years. Now Mrs. Truman has decided that life at the White House won't run smoothly and properly unless Mrs. Helm remains as her social secretary. So, to the delight of everyone concerned, Mrs. Helm is going to "Stay on."

● MANY WOMEN WILL ENVY MRS. TRUMAN because she is the first lady and because she is fitting so charmingly into her new and difficult role.

But I shall envy Mrs. Truman because in moving over the big second floor of the White House she was able to move furniture around as she wished. To try a table here and a chair there. To pull up a sofa and switch a lamp. To say: "Let me think now. No—that was a mistake! What I really wanted was to put that green love seat under the gilt mirror! Not the gold chair under the gilt mirror! Let me see . . . is that what I really want?"

"I'm not quite certain. . . . Let's move the things around the other way. Let's move everything the other way. Let's make the bedroom into the sitting room and the sitting room into the sewing room. . . . I believe I'd like the rose rug better in the hall. . . . No. Let's study that for a while. . . ."

I doubt if Mrs. Truman did the actual pulling and shoving of the furniture herself, though she may have given a piano or an arm chair a slight push here and there. But what fun to have the White House to work on! Not the first floor of the White House. That is sacred to the Fine Arts commission. Nobody as much as straightens out a rug there without permission of the board of visitors or something or other.

But think of the attic and cellar store-rooms that Mrs. Truman could dig into! All those half forgotten pieces there. Bought by some First Lady and discarded by the next First Lady who thought she had better taste than her predecessor! "Fixing up" the White House would spell complete heaven to most women.

Prompt Relief For Bleeding In Ulcer

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M. D.

IT has been estimated that between 10 and 60 per cent of those persons who have ulcers of the stomach and first part of the bowel have bleeding from these ulcers. It is said that the number of bleeding ulcers is increasing, due to the abnormal physical and mental strain associated with the war. Bleeding generally occurs because a small artery at the base of the ulcer is eroded or broken open.

When Ulcer Bleeds

Should an ulcer begin to bleed, the patient should be put to bed. Rest at once. Visitors should be kept away. These two things will help to bring on relaxation, which in turn helps to lessen the amount of acid in the stomach and decrease the movements of the stomach, giving the ulcer a chance to heal.

It is also important to quiet the patient, to lessen his fears, since anxiety and fear also increase the secretions and activity of the stomach. The patient should realize that bleeding is a frequent complication in ulcers and that it responds well to the proper treatment.

If the patient is restless, the physician may give him such a drug as morphine in certain instances. Other physicians use such drugs as phenobarbital.

Another step in the treatment is to give plenty of fluids. The fluids

may be given by mouth, or by injection under the skin when there is vomiting.

If these two methods do not give the patient sufficient fluids, the fluids may be injected directly into a vein.

If the patient's pulse rate gets too fast or his blood pressure begins to fall because of the bleeding, the injection of blood into a vein may be life-saving.

Laxative drugs should not be employed. About the fifth day of treatment, injection into the lower bowel, that is an enema, may be employed to produce a bowel movement, if it is necessary.

Further Steps

Further steps in the treatment consist in giving alkalies such as baking soda and magnesium subcarbonate. Iron-containing drugs may also be employed.

Not so many years ago, when a patient had a bleeding ulcer he was starved for a period of time. At present he is at once given a diet made up of milk, cream, butter, eggs, strained cereals and other soft foods. Feedings are given at two-hour intervals between 8:00 a.m. and 8:00 p.m.

In a very few instances of bleeding ulcer, operation may be required, depending on the extent of the bleeding. With modern treatment, prompt relief usually is obtained.

TERRY ARNOLD, a young Vermont newspaperwoman, has written a fairly successful novel. To gather material for a second book she has gone to the Argentine, her subject matter to be the wealthy playboy set of that Latin-American country.

BROOKS KIMBERLY, owner of Ultimo Ventura, a race horse;
CORINNE ARTIGAS, Kimberly's fiancée, and
RAFF CORDOBA, friend of Kimberly and a professional painter.

YESTERDAY: Terry visits the gaucha families living on the estate and tries her college Spanish on them. In the evening she goes out for a drive and on her return Raff unexpectedly kisses her and gets a stinging blow in return.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

THE SUN was warm and lush, the cooling of doves in the trees about the grounds as soothing as ever when Terry awoke the next morning, but these tranquil estancia sights and sounds failed to lift her gloom.

She felt cheap and humiliated over last night's episode. Strangely enough, it was Brooks' inscrutable look that hurt the most. She might have convinced Raff that the impression he had chosen to take from her stories was wrong. But Brooks' opinion of her, she felt was now irrevocably formed. To the Argentine strict code of manners her tales of hay rides and drug store revels had probably seemed the unprincipled freedom of complete license.

She pulled herself out of bed and dragged disgustedly toward the shower. "Just give you enough rope!" she taunted her reflection as she passed a mirror.

But as she dressed she grew more resigned. She had worn out her welcome here last night certainly, but after all she was getting only her just deserts. She had been accepting hospitality under false pretenses. She was a fraud and a fake. She had been worse than a sponger.

When she published her novel it would be a vicious bite at the hand that had fed her so lavishly. Because now, she felt sure of her book. All the slavish struggle with the starving artist days in Buenos Aires was over. It was all now writing itself. Through its pages, Jime and Angela and Brooks and Raff and Corinne—even the baroness and Artigas were vying for expression. The broad sunlit miles of the estancia were there, with the owls on the fence posts and the flocks of ostriches and the plump little perdiz. The blue pampas nights were there and the strange quietness of endless space.

She had gotten, like a thief, what she came for. Better really, this cool parting. She would feel less guilty when they found she had exploited them!

She answered Angela's timid knock with an absent, "Come in." The small, brown-skinned girl slipped in noiselessly with her breakfast tray and her usual smile of adoration. Pedro, she reported, was fine today and was playing in the sun with his father's old saddle. And the senorita looked beautiful this morning.

Terry's spirits were infinitely higher now. On grateful impulse, she found a bright scarf for Angela and tied it on over her peasant dress. The child left in a transport of delight, and Terry went back to her breakfast tray.

There was a folded paper beside the coffee pot. Wonderingly, she opened it. It said, in foreign scrawl: "I am in, as you say, the dog house. If you will not accept my abject apology for my unmentionable behavior last night I shall be thrown out, as I should be."

"Worthlessly but respectfully yours, RAFF."

She laughed aloud, and was able to eat her breakfast with her usual zest. This might be mere formality, but it wasn't. She was sure of it. She had convinced Raff, she felt, by the force of her instinctive slap. But Brooks was a different matter. No, the situation, though slightly improved, was basically unchanged. She would go back to Buenos Aires today and finish her book.

In her yellow slack suit and aqua wedgies and hair ribbon, she went down to the terrace after breakfast. Brooks and Corinne, lounging in long chairs, greeted her pleasantly. There was no sign in Brooks' eyes that he remembered last night's incident at all.

Raff and Jime, bent over a table piled with sketches, glanced briefly at her. Jime said warmly, "How did you rest, dear?" Raff said, "Good morning, Sunshine!"

For one instant Terry was tempted to ignore last night and encroach longer on this heavenly group. She had never in her life been so happy. She probably never would be again. But her stern Vermont reason saved her. They were apparently overlooking her behavior last night as courtesy to a guest. But it was her place to understand this, fold up her tent and slip away. She crossed purposefully to the table where Jime and Raff were now arguing. She saw that the sketches were crude architect's drawings. She was puzzled and asked about them before she could stop herself.

Jime beamed at her proudly. "They are the plans for the houses I am building for the gauchos' families on the estancia," she said.

Terry caught her breath. "But how wonderful!" she breathed impulsively. She thought of Angela's eager little face and Pedro's cherubic look. How they would love a new house!

"When are you starting them?" The question stopped Jime. Brooks and Corinne laughed.

It was Raff who answered as he lazily lit a cigaret. "Never," he said. "It's just a nice hobby for Jime and a home for me and no work for either of us."

"Oh!" Terry's disappointment was genuine, and Jime gazed about at Brooks, Corinne and Raff with startled disapproval. Suddenly she clipped voice, "So you think I'm not serious about it? Well, I am. And it's quite true I have been dreaming far too long over it." She turned to Raff with sudden blazing command. "Get these crude drawings out of my sight," she ordered. "Bring me some decent blueprints. And if you've forgotten your professional training, I'll get an architect who hasn't."

As the four young people stared at the belligerent Jime, a voice came from the doorway. "My stars—is Raff going to work?" It was the baroness who said.

"It looks like it," muttered Raff. "Someone should have asked that question months ago," she said. "You're the one who can help me. While Raff does the blueprints, you and I will see about the rooms. Do you know anything about interior decoration?"

"I've decorated plenty of rooms," Terry grinned, thinking of her endless number of two-by-four living quarters in New York. Then she tardily remembered. "But, Jime, I came down to tell you—I must leave."

Raff sent her a look of rebuke and entreaty. Brooks and Corinne protested with warmth and naturalness. The baroness spluttered. "You've just started teaching me the latest Norte American slang!" But it was Jime who put her foot down.

"Is any relative or friend of yours dying?"

Terry, surprised, said, "No." "Well then," said Jime stridently, "you're staying right here till these houses are finished. A few weeks, a few months. You're young. You can lose them. I'm old. I need you. I fear that I must demand it."

Terry, in her bewilderment, began to laugh, but suddenly found there were tears in her eyes. "You're a darling," she whispered to Jime.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

WORST DANGER OF ALL

AMONG ALL the dangers against which a No Trump declarer must protect himself, the worst is that one of the defenders may run the low cards of a long suit. Usually a declarer makes his No Trump game contract if he can prevent the opponents from scoring those cards. To thwart them, he often must decide to avoid a finesse of his own longest suit, because losing it would enable the defenders to cash their best suit. In preference, he must sometimes work on a shorter suit of his own, because loss of a trick in it would not give the dangerous opponent the lead.

At all tables of the duplicate, West led his club 4, East playing the Q and South the K. But the very next trick decided whether the contract would be made or set. All of the Souths realized that, other things being equal, a No Trump declarer usually should try to set up the longest suit in either his hand or the dummy. Some of them, seeing that the dummy had the longest suit, diamonds, immediately went after it, winning the A and then finessing the J. When this lost to the Q, East returned the club 10, and the J was trapped. West therefore got four club tricks, setting the contract.

This was one time when "other things" were not equal, and therefore the longest suit, diamonds, was not the right one to develop. The shorter one, spades, was a far safer chance. Losing a finesse in it could not hurt, for West would find the clubs still stopped by the J if the lead came from him.

So some of the abler declarers, after winning the opener with the club K, went to dummy with the heart K and led the spade Q. After that lost to the K, South could regain the lead in any suit and try a second spade finesse. In any event, all he had to do was win one of two spade finessses to get nine tricks, and if West used a club for his return, South could take 10 tricks, as happened at some tables.

TRAINED TO FIGHT

MILITARY training in peacetime looks like a useful thing to the army which is fighting this war. That's the opinion of Dr. A. A. Hunter, Cambridge, O., district superintendent of the Methodist Church, who says: "Practically all the patients with whom I have talked at Fletcher General Hospital in Cambridge are in favor of some form of conscription after the war."

Certainly they are the ones who should know. They're the men who found themselves waging battles to the death against an aggressor whose armies were taught only war from childhood. They won, in spite of their short training, because that was thorough and because they were Americans, intelligent and ingenious, adapting themselves quickly to new conditions.

But they know, from experience, three things which lead them to favor peacetime conscription. If they had had such previous experience, much of the adjustment time could have been saved, the job done more quickly. If the enemy had known that we had millions of men with at least a year's military knowledge, he would have been slower to attack. And, should there be a next time, rocket bombs and similar weapons will leave little time for elementary training. These are points worth considering.

BETTER PEDESTRIANS

THE post-war pedestrian must think quicker and move faster, else he will gradually become extinct. So Herman A. MacDonald, Massachusetts Commissioner of Public Works, told a New York traffic conference. MacDonald is concerned at the coming increase in car speed, and is anxious to preserve this dwindling species.

An Oregon engineer complained to the convention that pedestrians were coddled. They expect motorists to get out of their way, which everyone knows they have no intention of doing.

A more constructive suggestion called for more sidewalks on rural roads. Walking on some country highways is about as healthful as walking on the railroad ties.

CARS COMING

INDUSTRIAL "reconversion" is a bugaboo to many people, but apparently need not be, if things are handled wisely. John R. Davis, Ford sales and advertising manager, insists that the closing of the great Ford bombing plants, which have latterly displaced motor production, need not cause any serious loss of jobs or long delay in changing over. And when the changes are accomplished, there will be eventually a place in the Ford organization for every one of the 1300,000 employees now on the payroll. As for quantity production, the industry as a whole, when it gets its full stride again, will be building five to six million cars a year, of which Ford will build 2,000,000.

These are pleasant things to look forward to, while gazing sadly at a demobilized flivver in the garage.

Punching Bags in Clook

By HELEN ESSARY

WASHINGTON—The extra legislative activities of those two congressmen, John Taber (R) of New York and Pat Cannon (D) of Florida, who fight and fight over the $2,500 expense allowance for House members, convince me that a little of the extra United States cash should be used to set up a few punching bags in congressional cloak rooms.

If the irate legislators could give their big muscles a work-out before meeting in debate, brawls might be avoided when the boys come face to face.

Lady members of Congress don't fight. Or pull hair, either. They speak a few off-stage words about each other now and then. But you have to be pretty mean yourself to recognize anything but kindness in even the worst intentioned adjectives.

Women members of Congress not only behave better than the gents, they also are better looking. Most of the feminine members wear sleek suits, plus frilly or tailored blouses and boutonnieres and such. Also the feminine members have that brushed-up look the fashion magazines demand, which is so difficult to combine with a career. A whipped-down look is much more easily achieved.

Congresswoman Margaret C. Smith of Maine is a smart looking, smart acting congresswoman. She is, you might say, "the congresswoman's congresswoman." She is alert and reliable, thinks clearly and doesn't make mistakes. Just read an entertaining magazine article on "Maine Meets the Pacific" by Mrs. Smith, in which the

By PAUL MALLON

NEW YORK, June 11—It was a hard-war program which Mr. Truman put before congress. Unlike Mr. Roosevelt, he told the people what was needed in men and energy to defeat the Japanese. Like Mr. Roosevelt, his primary point was that we must drive the Japs to unconditional surrender.

Criticism immediately arose, disclosing opposition on this point such as existed against Mr. Roosevelt. It is not ill-natured opposition but represented a genuine view that lives can be saved by concessions.

I saw one critique which put the matter this way: Mr. Roosevelt was a frustrated person trying to imitate in this war general "unconditional surrender" Grant in the Civil war, who earned his nickname at Fort Donaldson but gave generous terms to Lee at Appomattox.

I think I can demonstrate, if you will read on, that any procedure except the Roosevelt-Truman policy of unconditional surrender is not only impractical but impossible—and the hope of many people to save lives by offering conditional surrender is founded on an unsound understanding of military history, particularly the same Civil war.

The Japanese war is being conducted by a ruling military clique with the full support of the people. No terms to the clique are possible because these would mean the end of the persons who operate it. Any terms offered to the people could not be effective until they overthrow the clique, and therefore the only feasible time to consider terms is after that. But when they have done this, they are prepared for unconditional or any surrender.

Try to write some terms to encourage them to revolution and you will see how impossible is the task. One critique I saw suggested we offer the people the restoration of their emperor. What emperor, to what Japanese class and for how long? Unless Jap military might is first crushed can we possibly contrive anything to prevent another bigger Pearl Harbor 20 years hence—a successful one next time.

I do not believe wars can be ended except by unconditional surrender. The terms which Grant gave Lee at Appomattox had nothing to do with the end of the war. Further resistance proved impossible before Lee asked for terms. The South had been crushed. Indeed, it lay prostrate for nearly 50 years. Does anyone think an earlier conclusion could have been reached to the Civil war if Grant's terms had been offered earlier? It is impossible for anyone to believe that. And what were those terms? Basically that the officers could keep their sidearms and the soldiers their horses (which they owned anyway as the Confederate commissary could not furnish any) in order that they might go home to plow and to live, without requiring federal support.

You have to beat an enemy in any war in order to get any terms, then after they are beaten, you can call it whatever you like—it still is unconditional surrender. In the war of 1812 we negotiated a peace before we won the battle of New Orleans, and this fiasco resulted in terms so unpopular they could not be enforced by the victors against us.

Nothing can be gained by kidding ourselves. Lives are saved in wars by swift, decisive action. The quicker you beat the enemy, the smaller is your casualty list. Therefore what you need is overpowering might and shrewd generalship, not peace programs. You can never save lives by selling your war aims short.

● NOW THAT WE ARE TALKING ABOUT WOMEN, here is a bouquet for Mrs. James M. Helm, White House social secretary. Mrs. Helm was secretary to Mrs. Woodrow Wilson for six years. She was secretary to Mrs. Roosevelt for 12 years. Now Mrs. Truman has decided that life at the White House won't run smoothly and properly unless Mrs. Helm remains as her social secretary. So, to the delight of everyone concerned, Mrs. Helm is going to "stay on."

● MANY WOMEN WILL ENVY MRS. TRUMAN because she is the first lady and because she is fitting so charmingly into her new and difficult role.

But I shall envy Mrs. Truman because in doing over the big second floor of the White House she was able to move furniture around as she wished. To try a table here and a chair there. To pull up a sofa and switch a lamp. To say: "Let me think now. No—that was a mistake! What I really wanted was to put that green love seat under the gilt mirror! Not the gold chair under the gilt mirror! Let me see . . . is that what I really want?"

"I'm not quite certain. . . Let's move the things around the other way. Let's move everything the other way. Let's make the bedroom into the sitting room and the sitting room into the sewing room. . . I believe I'd like the rose rug better in the hall. . . No. Let's study that for a while. . ."

I doubt if Mrs. Truman did the actual pulling and shoving of the furniture herself, though she may have given a piano or an arm chair a slight push here and there. But what fun to have the White House to work on! Not the first floor of the White House. That is sacred to the Fine Arts commission. Nobody as much as straightens out a rug there without permission of the board of visitors or something or other.

But think of the attic and cellar store-rooms that Mrs. Truman could dig into! All those half forgotten pieces there. Bought by some First Lady and discarded by the next First Lady who thought she had better taste than her predecessor! "Fixing up" the White House would spell complete heaven to most women.

Prompt Relief For Bleeding In Ulcer

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

IT has been estimated that between 10 and 60 per cent of those persons who have ulcers of the stomach and first part of the bowel have bleeding from these ulcers. It is said that the number of bleeding ulcers is increasing, due to the abnormal physical and mental strain associated with the war. Bleeding generally occurs because a small artery at the base of the ulcer is eroded or broken open.

When Ulcer Bleeds

Should an ulcer begin to bleed, the patient should be put to bed. Rest at once. Visitors should be kept away. These two things will help to bring on relaxation, which in turn helps to lessen the amount of acid in the stomach and decrease the movements of the stomach, giving the ulcer a chance to heal.

It is also important to quiet the patient, to lessen his fears, since anxiety and fear also increase the secretions and activity of the stomach. The patient should realize that bleeding is a frequent complication in ulcers and that it responds well to the proper treatment.

If the patient is restless, the physician may give him such a drug as morphine in certain instances. Other physicians use such drugs as phenobarbital.

Another step in the treatment is to give plenty of fluids. The fluids

may be given by mouth, or by injection under the skin when there is vomiting.

If these two methods do not give the patient sufficient fluids, the fluids may be injected directly into a vein.

If the patient's pulse rate gets too fast or his blood pressure begins to fall because of the bleeding, the injection of blood into a vein may be life-saving.

Laxative drugs should not be employed. About the fifth day of treatment, injection into the lower bowel, that is an enema, may be employed to produce a bowel movement, if it is necessary.

Further Steps

Further steps in the treatment consist in giving alkalies such as baking soda and magnesium subcarbonate. Iron-containing drugs may also be employed.

Not so many years ago, when a patient had a bleeding ulcer he was starved for a period of time. At present he is at once given a diet made up of milk, cream, butter, eggs, strained cereals and other soft foods. Feedings are given at two-hour intervals between 8:00 a.m. and 8:00 p.m.

In a very few instances of bleeding ulcer, operation may be required, depending on the extent of the bleeding. With modern treatment, prompt relief usually is obtained.

Terry, surprised, said, "No."

"Well then," said Jime stridently, "you're staying right here till these houses are finished. A few weeks, a few months. You're young. You can lose them. I'm old. I need you. I fear that I must demand it."

Terry, in bewilderment, began to laugh, but suddenly found there were tears in her eyes. "You're a darling," she whispered to Jime.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

WORST DANGER OF ALL

AMONG ALL the dangers against which a No Trump declarer must protect himself, the worst is that one of the defenders may run the low cards of a long suit. Usually a declarer makes his No Trump game contract if he can prevent the opponents from scoring those cards. To thwart them, he often must decide to avoid a finesse of his own longest suit, because losing it would enable the defenders to cash their best suit. In preference, he must sometimes work on a shorter suit of his own, because loss of a trick in it would not give the dangerous opponent the lead.

At all tables of the duplicate, West led his club 4, East playing the Q and South the K. But the very next trick decided whether the contract would be made or set. All of the Souths realized that, other things being equal, a No Trump declarer usually should try to set up the longest suit in either his hand or the dummy. Some of them, seeing that the dummy had the longest suit, diamonds, immediately went after it, winning the A and then finessing the J. When this lost to the Q, East returned the club 10, and the J was trapped. West therefore got four club tricks, setting the contract.

This was one time when "other things" were not equal, and therefore the longest suit, diamonds, was not the right one to develop. The shorter one, spades, was a far safer chance. Losing a finesse in it could not hurt, for West would find the clubs still stopped by the J if the lead came from him.

So some of the able declarers, after winning the opener with the club K, went to dummy with the heart K and led the spade Q. After that lost to the K, South could regain the lead in any suit and try a second spade finesse. In any event, all he had to do was win one of two spade finesse, to get nine tricks, and if West used a club for his return, South could take 10 tricks, as happened at some tables.

EDITORS ENDORSE CONFERENCE ON
NEWS FREEDOM

WASHINGTON, June 11—A world conference in Australia on freedom of news was endorsed today by the American Society of Newspaper Editors on recommendation of three globe-circling U. S. editorial leaders.

The newspapermen reported yesterday to ASNE directors on their 40,000-mile tour during which they discussed freedom of the press and communications with most of the world's political and military leaders.

They said they found many governments "controlling the press politically under the guise of war security" but that foreign editors also desired more press freedom than most nations have permitted.

They reported that Russian newspapermen are skeptical of the American conception of a free press but that Vice Commissar of Foreign Affairs L. A. Lazovsky voiced a willingness to seek a common ground for freer exchange of news and fuller mutual coverage.

The ASNE-sponsored tour, started in January and completed last April, was made by Wilbur Forrest, assistant editor of the

EDITORS ENDORSE CONFERENCE ON NEWS FREEDOM

WASHINGTON, June 11 — A world conference in Australia on freedom of news was endorsed today by the American Society of Newspaper Editors on recommendation of three globe-circling U. S. editorial leaders.

The newspapermen reported yesterday to ASNE directors on their 40,000-mile tour during which they discussed freedom of the press and communications with most of the world's political and military leaders.

They said they found many governments "controlling the press politically under the guise of war security" but that foreign editors also desired more press freedom than most nations have permitted.

They reported that Russian newspapermen are skeptical of the American conception of a free press but that Vice Commissar of Foreign Affairs L. A. Lazovsky voiced a willingness to seek a common ground for freer exchange of news and fuller mutual coverage.

The ASNE-sponsored tour, started in January and completed last April, was made by Wilbur Forrest, assistant editor of the

New York Herald-Tribune, Ralph McGill, editor of the Atlanta Constitution and Carl W. Ackerman, dean of the Columbia university graduate school of journalism.

When Milo Boulton, emcee of "We, the People," visited the SS Franklin with heroic Lt. Donald Gary, he noticed about 80 sacks of mail that can never be delivered. The mail was taken out of Pearl Harbor, but will have to be returned to the senders with "lost in action" marked on the envelopes. Milo says it struck him as one of the most potent tacit reminders that there is still a war to be won and that the way to get busy and win it is to purchase more and more war bonds.

NEWS Behind the NEWS

Innuendos suggest we might do well to leave Japan with something to offset prospective Russian inroads in Asia, or capture of that continent, as Europe has been considerably captured. That is not our way. This nation acts on the basis of first deciding what is right, and then pursuing it with irresistible might to final conclusion. We will gain nothing by aping European methods of double-dealing. We have done better as a nation following our own way than any of the double-dealers in all European or world history. There is greater power in the American heritage than anyone can muster. That power and heritage will survive in this world long after the double-dealers have contrived their extinction by their own artifices.

FIERY DODGER BOSS CHARGED WITH ASSAULT

NEW YORK, June 11—Stormy Leo Durocher's immediate future as manager of the Dodgers rested today upon the reaction of 1) the King's county felony court, 2) Dodger boss Branch Rickey, and 3) the Brooklyn fans to his alleged attack upon a grandstand critic, Saturday night.

Durocher denied that he and Special Policeman Joseph Moore, attacked the fan, ex-soldier John Christian, 21, Durocher is to be arraigned today in Brooklyn felony court.

Christian, who suffered a broken jaw, black eye, and cuts and bruises on his head and face, is in Kings county hospital. He identified Durocher and Moore as his assailants shortly before yesterday's double header with Philadelphia. Both were taken to a police station and held on charges of felonious assault until they obtained $1,000 bail.

According to Christian, Moore struck him with a blunt instrument and Durocher grabbed the bludgeon and hit him some more. After that he said Durocher hit him on the jaw "with a left hook."

Rickey said that he would "take no action in the matter until I learn more about both sides of it."

"This is a serious accusation and I have no right to decide what is to be done with Mr. Durocher until I hear his version of what happened," Rickey said.

Rickey placed Coach Charley Dresen in charge of the club pending settlement of the case in court.

VERNON KENNEDY TRADED TO CINCINNATI REDS

PHILADELPHIA, June 11—

Veteran Vernon Kennedy, who once pitched a no-hit, no-run game for the Chicago White Sox, has been traded to the Cincinnati Reds for infielder Walter Flager, the Philadelphia Phillies announced yesterday.

Kennedy has lost three games this season and has no victories. Flager, currently batting .175, played with Birmingham of the Southern Association last season.

Toledo and Minneapolis split a double-header. The Millers lost the first game 4 to 3, but staged a comeback in the second game by defeating Toledo 8 to 2 in seven innings.

In the other Association twin bill, St. Paul trounced the Columbus Red Birds 17 to 6 and 3 to 2. The scheduled seven inning second game went 11 innings.

HOOP JR. LIKED IN PREAKNESS

Arcaro And Derby Winner
May Make More History
Next Saturday

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 11—

Hoop Jr.'s smashing six-length Kentucky Derby triumph in a wall of mud was expected to make him an odds-on choice to score a repeat performance in the Preakness at Baltimore next Saturday, turf experts in the hard-boots country predicted today.

The bounding bay colt, which won going-away from the big field of 15 in the blue-grass classic Saturday, may not win the three-year-old triple crown with victories in the Preakness and the Belmont stakes, but he already has established a place in turf history.

Bought by 35-year-old Fred W. Hooper, Jr., a Floridian millionaire contractor, he became the first thoroughbred "purchase" to win the Derby, and he made his famed "daddy," Sir Galahad III, the world's leading money winning sire. The $64,850 winning return to Hooper brought the total winnings of the get of the French horse to $3,224,389, surpassing the previous mark of $3,178,263 held by Man O'War.

And for Jockey Eddie Arcaro, the Covington, Ky., Italian boy who booted him home in front, Hoop Jr., provided an opportunity to make new history among the riding clan. Arcaro's victory gave him three Derby wins, tying the records of Isaac Murphy and Earl Sande. Arcaro is at the peak of his career and probably will get other Derby chances. He has won the triple crown title once, with Whirlaway in 1941, and can become the first jockey to do it twice. Sande accomplished it in 1930 on Gallant Fox.

Principal opposition in the Preakness may come from horses Hoop, Jr., did not face in the Derby. The new comers include Pavot, two-year-old champion of last season who won eight straight races, Dockstader and Coincidence. Calumet Farms' Pot O'Luck, runner-up in the Derby, and Col. C. V. Whitney's Jeep are being sent to Maryland for the mile and three-sixteenths run at Pimlico, but in the 16-horse field may not go. Burning Dream, Byemond, and Sea Swallow are three likely starters.

If Hoop Jr., wins the Preakness it will leave him with only the Belmont mile and a half test to complete the triple crown won only by Sir Barton, Gallant Fox, War Admiral, Omaha, Whirlaway, and Count Fleet.

Hooper will be shooting at another mark in the Preakness. Only two other horses, Count Fleet in 1943 and Gallant Fox in 1930, have gone on from winning the Wood Memorial to take the triple crown.

Hooper, who paid $10,200 for the colt at the Lexington, Ky., yearling sales already has won $89,270 with him, all but $5,300 this year. In addition to the Derby triumph, his winning of the second section of the Wood brought a purse of $19,120.

The Tigers doubled to second, splitting their double bill with the White Sox at Detroit. They won 3 to 2, behind Paul (Dizzy) Trout, while Orval Grove, with relief help from Ed Lopat provided the White Sox with a 9 to 4 triumph in the second. Roy Cullenbine, with a double and homer, led the Tiger attack in the opener. Bill Nagel hit a two-run homer for the White Sox in the second game while Paul Richards' grand-slam homer for the Tigers went to waste.

Lefty Weldon West gave the Browns a 4 to 1 four-hit win at Cleveland after the Indians won the opener, 2 to 1, Jim Bagby gaining a 10-inning victory after five straight defeats. Frank Hayes spoiled a shutout for West by hitting his sixth homer. Bagby's single, an error and Paul O'Dea's single gave the Indians the winning run in the first game.

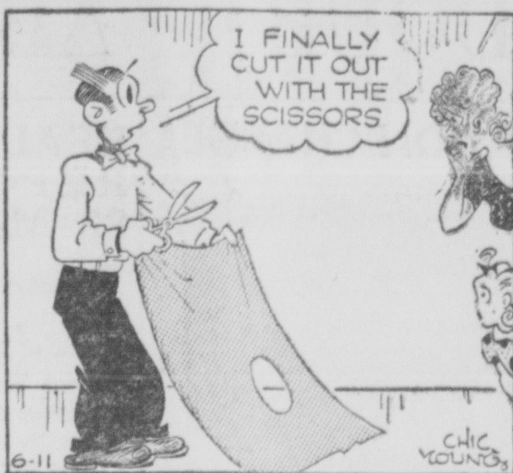

The Washington at Philadelphia double header was postponed.

A STAR GUEST
Lays Swarthout, famous mezzo of the Metropolitan Association, will visit the Stone program, Tuesday. Swarthout, who has just retired to New York from a concert in Canada, will discuss notes of her career with Miss and her future plans which include three appearances in "Carotina" at New York's famous Lewis Stadium during the month of June.

pers of the Armed Forces are so keen on Mal Hallett. The popular orchestra leader, who will visit "The Victory Parade of Spotlight Bands" program on Tuesday, was an old friend of many of the boys who are now in uniform. Mal and his orchestra played for more college proms than any other band in the country. Since the war, he has been catching up with many of his admirers who are now in khaki and blue.

FATHER OF THE YEAR STAR

In a musical tribute to Father's Day, Dick Haymes, Helen Forrest and a special guest will salute the man selected by the National Father's Day Committee as the War Worker Father of the year, on their "Everything for the Boys" broadcast Tuesday. The recipient of the salute is Ora Colwell, punch press operator at the Electric Auto-Lite plant in Toledo, veteran of the first World War and father of two sons in the Marine Corps, one of them now on Okinawa.

RADIO NEWS NOTES

Because he listened to Milton Berle's "Let Yourself Go" program, James Sledge of Houston, Texas, is $500 richer. That amount was given to him as a prize in the Magazine Digest's contest for radio jokes and that publication arranged to have the check handed to him just as the announcement was made on the Berle program. The joke he heard and sent in was based on dialogue between Bette Bone Lawrence Tibbett and Berle. Said Tibbett, "If you want to learn how to be a singer, Milton, you should try to vocalize with mouthful of pebbles." Berle's reply: "I tried that out in the backyard, but I got hiccoughs and broke 14 windows."

When the "Perry Wayne Show" moves Friday, July 6, the guests for the opening show will be Pat Baker, ebullient comic and emcee and lovely Gladius Swarthout, Metropolitan Opera prima donna.

Alice Yourman, actress-announcer of "Two On A Clue," tells that lately she's been playing "mother" roles in practically her shows. It's type-casting to Alice, as she is the mother of two lovely children, Ann and Lee.

In Longfellow's poem, "Hiawatha," the hero has an Iroquois name, the heroine a Sioux name and the poem is based upon Ojibwa legends.

RATION BOARD STILL IN DOUBT ABOUT CANNING SUGAR PROGRAM

OPA OFFICIALS KNOW LITTLE ABOUT PLANS

Emergency Setup May Be Worked Out Soon Board Informed

Pickaway county's War Price and Rationing Board can tell about as little as anyone as to how or when housewives will be able to get their sugar for home-canning. Issuance of canning sugar was frozen June 2 throughout the United States.

The local OPA does not have any idea as to when the freeze will be removed and applications for sugar will be acted upon. There is a meeting in Cleveland Monday and another meeting in Columbus Tuesday which the OPA hopes will straighten out the canning sugar freeze.

Two reasons have been given for the shortage that resulted in a temporary halt on rationing it—a short crop in Cuba and abuse of rationing leniency last year.

At the Pickaway county rationing board, to date, 80,000 pounds of sugar have been issued for the month of May. In May 1944 only 49,000 pounds of sugar were issued. For almost two weeks of May, this year, applications for sugar were not even being accepted by the local OPA. Since June 2 the OPA has not issued any sugar but there have been many applications sent to the board.

There is a general impression—one in which the OPA at least implies agreement—that last year much of the sugar bought for rationing never went for that purpose. Whether the applications were deliberately falsified or whether the applicants just never got around to doing as much canning as they planned remains a matter of speculation. The OPA has let it be known that there are penalties for making false statements in applying for rationed commodities.

Without specifically stating any connections, it has been said at the Ration Board here that applications for canning sugar increased when the regular rations were cut.

A parallel situation developed when point values of other foods went up—there was an increase in the number of reports of lost ration books.

The chairman of the county's Ration Board has been in conference with district OPA officials in Columbus this week on the canning sugar situation. It has been learned, but the results or what plans, if any, were made, remain undisclosed.

One thing seems certain—that home canning sugar will be issued on an emergency basis for the remainder of the canning season. Some definite announcement is expected by the board here soon, although there is no assurance when it will come.

The 12 OPA district chiefs in this five-state area have been conferring with chairmen of local boards, it has been disclosed, and a meeting of these twelve men is scheduled for Cleveland Monday. It is understood that a definite canning sugar program will be worked out at this meeting, but rationing officials here have no inkling of what it will be.

MORE RAIN FORECAST; 1.54 INCHES RECORDED

More showers are forecast for Monday to continue the week-end weather pattern of intermittent rain Saturday and Sunday. The officially recorded rainfall for the 48-hour period from 7 a. m. Saturday until 7 a. m. Monday was 1.54 inches.

Temperatures were above those of the same period last year. A high of 84 degrees was recorded at the Circleville weather bureau Sunday, June 10, 1944, temperatures were recorded at 77 degrees. Monday morning the official thermometer had dropped to 64 degrees. A year ago the temperature was 52 degrees.

LADY NEARLY CHOKED WHILE LYING IN BED—DUE TO STOMACH GAS

One lady said a few days ago that she used to be afraid to go to bed at night. She was swollen with stomach gas, which always got worse when she went to bed, and the gas would rise up in her throat after she lay down and would nearly choke her. She couldn't lie flat. Had to prop herself up on pillows. Recently this lady got E.R.B.-HELP and now says gas is gone, stomach feels fine, bowels are regular and she can go to bed and sleep soundly.

ERB-HELP contains 12 Great Herbs; they cleanse bowels, clear gas from stomach, act on sluggish liver and kidneys. Miserable people soon feel different all over. So don't go on suffering! Get E.R.B.-HELP. Sold by all Drug Stores in Circleville.

NAZI PLAN TO BLOW UP CANAL IS REVEALED

DUBLIN, June 11—An Irishman who served in the British army and was captured said today that the Nazis had plotted to blow up the Panama canal.

The soldier, John Cushing, said he was detailed to lead a sabotage squad to blow up the Gatun locks of the canal after he had pretended to fall in with the Germans.

Cushing, who was captured at Lille in 1940, said that in March, 1941, many Irishmen were taken from other camps and put in a special Irish camp near Berlin. The Germans told them they would get special treatment if they did special work.

Cushing said that he pretended to go along with the Germans, hoping he could get to England to tell the war office of their plans. When he discussed the Nazi plan over a tapped telephone line, he said he was caught and sentenced to be shot.

"I owe my life and an apology to an American family," he said. "I told them I was the brother of the famous American brain specialist, Harvey Cushing. They commuted my sentence."

CHILDREN WILL HELP DEFEND JAP HOMELAND

LONDON, June 11—Japan moved today to conscript boys of 15 and girls of 17 for combat service in the event of an American invasion of the Japanese home islands.

The government introduced a bill in the diet (parliament) to draft all men from 15 to 60 and all women from 17 to 40 into the people's "volunteer" corps, radio Tokyo said.

The bill stipulated the corps would be converted into combat units and put in the front lines "should the Japanese mainland become the scene of decisive battle," Tokyo said.

Another Tokyo broadcast said the government was setting up regional administrators capable of making semi-independent decisions in the event of an emergency, presumably including an invasion. The government also extended debate in the diet over a government request to the body to hand over its powers to enable the Suzuki cabinet to rule by decree in Japan's darkest hour.

The extension of the debate through today indicated that opposition had developed to the government's proposal, which would give Japan a complete dictatorship.

Radio Tokyo conceded that "unexpectedly heated debates" had developed in the lower house.

LADY NEARLY CHOKED WHILE LYING IN BED—DUE TO STOMACH GAS

One lady said a few days ago that she used to be afraid to go to bed at night. She was swollen with stomach gas, which always got worse when she went to bed, and the gas would rise up in her throat after she lay down and would nearly choke her. She couldn't lie flat. Had to prop herself up on pillows. Recently this lady got ERB-HELP and now says gas is gone, stomach feels fine, bowels are regular and she can go to bed and sleep soundly.

ERB-HELP contains 12 Great Herbs; they cleanse bowels, clear gas from stomach, act on sluggish liver and kidneys. Miserable people soon feel different all over. So don't go on suffering! Get ERB-HELP. Sold by all Drug Stores in Circleville.
